PROVIDENCE SPRING ELEMENTARY

NOTES FROM PRINCIPAL
ARMBRUSTER

Closing out the school year

The closing of the 2019-2020 school year is unprecedented and surely will go down in history. It is truly a collaborative effort from parents, staff, and students that we ventured into our virtual learning platform so successfully. One of my favorite quotes from Glenna Doyle states, "Life is not safe, and so our task is not to promise our kids there will be no turbulence. It's to assure them that when the turbulence comes, we will all hold hands and get through it together." I am extremely proud and humbled by the PSE staff and community for their commitment to a safe, challenging virtual learning experience! #pseunited

Preparing for the 2020-2021 school year is fluid as we learn new guidelines and expectations. We feel individually and collectively vulnerable, but virtual learning brings possibilities for societal transformation and creativity in teaching and learning. Summer will be a period of reflection and provide time for us to reimagine education. Learning happens best when it is active, responsive, and contextualized. We will continue to prioritize maximum grace and flexibility while fostering intellectual nourishment and social connection.

Thank you for the many learning experiences and fond memories you have provided in my first year as principal. I am proud of our Paideia accreditation and continued partnership with the Talent Development department. We will continue to build on our Paideia pillar and focus on our Character Education pillar next year.

SUMMER Assignments

As we move into a COVID summer, our team modified expectations for summer learning. Based on teacher surveys and vertical planning data, when children build their stamina in reading and know their math facts, they are able to move into deeper, complex material. Therefore, we will provide a school wide summer project. Teachers will share expectations on June 8 and 9 with students during the zoom morning meetings. Stay tuned to PSE Facebook for how our PSE staff stays engaged with our own families over the summer.

Respectfully,
Jane
Armbruster
